

1. The most impressive moment for me is when the vote shows that Anutin will be Prime Minister. Like when it was Tim Pita, even though he got the most votes but he still couldn't be prime minister. But now they finally respect to the majority vote so it gives me hope about Thai democracy.
2. The most disappointing moment was when I saw through live that there is a politician sleeping while they talk about who going to be the prime minister. It just shows that to some politicians that supposed to be working hard to improve our country can just be so ignorant even in the important situations like finding a new prime minister.

1. According to the people party, After Anutin becomes the prime minister. He suppose to fix the constitution and form a new government in 4 months so I expect to be able to use my right as a Thai citizen to finally vote for new rightfully prime minister in my country.
